Abstract:

This paper will outline the main research issues for VET in regional Australia. It will do so by synthesising the research outcomes of the Centre for Research and Learning in Regional Australia (CRLRA) for the last two years, and will refer to specific examples from these studies to support its claims. The paper will conclude with a set of implications for policy, practice and further research in VET in regional Australia which, while being based on firm research outcomes, will also attempt to look into the future.
